

SEO AUDIT REPORT

Funngro SEO Audit

Audit date: 10 June 2026. Scope checked: homepage, earn page, brand page, robots file and sitemap.

Executive Summary

Funngro already has a strong SEO base: clear homepage metadata, Open Graph tags, Twitter tags, schema markup, a public robots file and a sitemap that includes earning, brand, story, blog, trust and legal pages. The biggest opportunity is route-level SEO. The initial HTML returned for the earn and brand routes currently uses homepage metadata and a homepage canonical, so those pages may not get full value in non-JavaScript crawlers, link previews and some SEO tools.

What Is Working Well

- Homepage title and description clearly position Funngro around online earning and large brand campaigns.
- The robots file allows crawl access and points to the sitemap.
- The sitemap includes major pages such as earn, brands, stories, blog, trust, FAQ, contact, careers and legal pages.
- Homepage Open Graph and Twitter card metadata are present for social sharing.
- Organization and WebSite structured data are present.
- Security headers such as HSTS, referrer policy and content type protection are present.

Priority Issues

Priority	Finding	Why It Matters	Recommended Fix
P1	Canonical host is inconsistent across www, non-www and sitemap URLs.	Mixed signals can split ranking equity and confuse reporting.	Pick one canonical host, then update redirects, canonicals, sitemap URLs and social URLs.
P1	Earn and brand routes return homepage metadata in initial HTML.	Route-specific pages may not rank or preview correctly if metadata only appears after JavaScript runs.	Pre-render or server-render public routes with unique title, description, canonical, OG tags and schema.
P2	Main JavaScript appears heavy for a marketing route.	Large JavaScript can affect mobile Core Web Vitals.	Run Lighthouse, split non-critical sections, defer analytics and keep above-the-fold CSS lean.
P2	High-intent keywords can be mapped more directly to route headings and internal links.	Explicit intent mapping helps search engines understand each page.	Target teen earning and Gen Z campaign keywords on dedicated sections.
